deavors to fulfill his agreement with his employers and patrons. But now and then a little pleasure is experienced in writing accounts of interesting weddings. Here is one: On Wednesday evening Mr. J. Soule Smith, a leading lawyer and a littrary writer of no mean ability, was united to Miss Juliet G. Bryan. The ceremony was performed at the residence of Mrs. Sarah Bryan, in this city, by Elder Robert Graham. The Daily Press of yesterday adds: To the young couple whose lives are now intertwined with each other we can only offer the incense of heartfelt wishes and prayers for their lasting happiness. May the richest benisons in the gift of Him who thought it not good for man to be who thought it not good for man to be alone, and in mercy to him instituted matrimony, be showered upon these two brave souls, and may the course of true love always end as happily as has theirs.

The citizens of Lexington owe the STAR a cordial patronage. It is the only paper coming here that contains a daily report of this and other places in Central Kentucky, and is more devoted and out-spoken on local affairs than all the rural roosters printed in this city. Some of these obscure prints would be almost unknown if the STAR had not scratched their backs and given them a free adver-tisement every once in a while. These papers are so hampered in by this and that olique and class that it is morally impossible for them to burst the social cords that bridle their quill pens. Fortunately, for the tax-payers, the STAR tunately, for the tax-payers, the Star will have no such cords.

It is high time the live stock men should cease their nonsense about imaginary pedigrees with a view of putting a fictitious value on a brindle cow or a bay mare. Such deceit will bring ruin to them and injure the community. Some of them are already feeling the effects of their nonsense.
